'RECOVERY DAY' CELEBRATED BY
CIVIC BODIESLuncheon Opens Program to Be Followed by Parade of Uniformed Bodies and Rally at City Hall.MAYOR DICKMANN, SPONSOR, SPEAKSWires Roosevelt of City's Testimonial in Honor of President's First Year in Office.A largely attended luncheon at Hotel Jefferson today, with Mayor Dickmann as principal speaker, opened the city's celebration of "Recovery day," marking the close of the first year of President Roosevelt's administration.The celebration, including an afternoon parade and a public program in the rotunda of City Hall, was sponsored by city officials, civic organizations and business houses, to call attention to improvement in business in the last year.
Mayor Dickmann's address, reported fully elsewhere, was a recital of reports of better business made to him by St. Louis firms.Concluding his address, the Mayor said he wished to convey to President Roosevelt the information that so far as St. Louis was concerned his recovery plans had been a success.The City Hall, Municipal Courts Building and new city auditorium, facing the new plaza, were decorated with flags and bunting.
Downtown stores, which were cooperating with special recovery sales, had window displays and store decorations in keeping with the occasion. There were many displays of photographs of the President. The larger downtown stores employed about 2200 extra employes for the day to handle sales.Speakers at the luncheon besides Mayor Dickmann were Jacob M.
Lashly, Dr. R. Emmet Kane, Henry
W. Kiel, Leo C. Fuller, William T.
Nardin and City Counselor Hay,
Frank E. Harris, general chairman. He introduced John J.
Wangle, who presented Thomas N.
Dysart, newly elected president of the Chamber of Commerce, who served as toastmaster. The invitation was delivered by Rabbi F. M.
Isaerman.More than 1500 attended the luncheon, tickets for which were $1.25. The crowd, which filled the Gold Room and overflowed into other dining rooms, included a strong representation of city employes. Loud speakers carried the addresses to the diners, and the Mayor's speech was broadcast.The climax of the program was the playing of the National Anthem by an orchestra while legions of uniformed men stood at attention on the stage and two young women in sailor's uniforms lifted a flag from huge portraits of Gov.
Park and Mayor Dickmann. At the same time a large photograph of President Roosevelt was held aloft on the stage.In a proclamation, Mayor Dick-mann asked the city generally to observe the first anniversary of national recovery. He suggested that ministers make recovery the theme of their sermons tomorrow and some have indicated they will do so.A telegram to Roosevelt.
A telegram telling of the celebration was sent to President Roosevelt today by Mayor Dick-mann. It follows:"As you have been advised, St.
Louis is celebrating the week-end of March third and fourth, 1934, as the first anniversary of national recovery, in line with the marked improvement in practically all lines of business since your inauguration one year ago. Local industries, merchants, civic organizations and their leaders are participating in a mammoth luncheon celebration at noon Saturday at which time reports of the first anniversary of national recovery will be broadcast.
The fields of business will be broadcast."These reports will be forwarded to you so that you may know personally of the success of your plans for national recovery upon business in the Greater St. Louis area. The luncheon celebration will be followed by a mass meeting in the rotunda at the City Hall in which citizens representing various groups will participate. In view of the wonderful response of our citizens to this celebration and the hearted endorsement of your recovery plans as shown in the response of our business leaders, I feel assured that the citizenry of Greater St. Louis join me in this testimonial of our admiration of your fine courage, wisdom and statesmanship during the most dif-

INSULL MUST GO;
FINAL ORDER IS ISSUED IN GREECERumor Is He Will Head for Syria; He Is Free to Enter Any Country That Will Receive Him.By the Associated Press.
ATHENS, March 3.—The Foreign Minister notified the Minister of the Interior today that Samuel In-sull Sr., fugitive former Chicago utilities operator, must leave Greece. It was said that he might head for Syria.The Foreign Minister said the final extension of Insull's permit to remain in the country had expired.Insull previously had gained repeated extensions of the permit under which he remained in Greece secure from American attempts to extradite him for trial in Chicago on charges of embezzlement and grand larceny in connection with the collapse of his enterprises.Where Insull will go was not known; he merely is expelled from Greece and may go to whatever country will receive him.The action of the Foreign Minister in ordering the expulsion follows two court actions by the United States. Insull won both trials, the Greek court ruling that he was not extraditable under the terms of the extradition treaty. Diplomats pressure was brought to bear by the United States and today's order was regarded as due largely to the Greek Government's desire to maintain cordial relations with Washington.It was understood that Insull was not immediately informed of the Government's decision. In any case, he seemed to be ignoring it.What preparations he may have made to meet the situation were not disclosed. He has made no application for a new United States passport and Greek officials said they had not issued him a laissez-passer to permit him to go to any other country.100 ARRESTED AT BUDAPEST

DR. DEAN FOUND GUILTY, GETS LIFE
IN POISON MURDERWoman Physician Convicted at Greenwood,
Miss., of Giving Drugged
Highball to Dr. Kennedy.JURY DELIBERATES
FOR FOUR HOURSTakes Three Ballots —
First Is 9 to 3 for Conviction, Second 11 to 1
and Last One UnanimousBy the Associated Press.
GREENWOOD, Miss., March 3.—
Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, woman physician, was convicted today of the poisoned highball murder of Dr.
John Preston Kennedy. The jury fixed the penalty at life imprisonment.Defense attorneys announced they would appeal immediately.
The jury took three ballots. The first, last night, was nine to three for conviction. The second, this morning, was eleven to one and the third was unanimous.Dr. Dean was taken into custody by the sheriff.
The case was given to the jury at 8:50 p. m. At 11:14 o'clock the jurors sent word that they wished to go to bed and got permission to retire while court was recessed until 9 o'clock this morning. The verdict was returned at 11 a. m.Summations of Evidence.
Summations of evidence taken in the case during the last month were made by three attorneys, each side to bring the trial to its close.A plea of acquittal and "God bless you" was made by Dick Denman of the defense after he and other defense lawyers had said the State "had failed utterly to prove her guilt.""Dr. Dean got on the stand and swore her innocence," said Denman.
"Because she wanted the word to know the truth about this case, she didn't have to testify. We could have rested our defense without that."Closing for the State, District Attorney Arthur Jordan asked the jury to bring in a verdict of guilty if you believe she is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.
Jordan charged flatly that Dr.
Dean poisoned Dr. Kennedy, in spite of her testimony that she did not meet him on the night he was stricken, last July 27, as charged in Dr. Kennedy's dying statement."Furious" at Dr. Kennedy,
"She was furious that Dr. Kennedy was leaving her to re-veal his wife," Jordan charged. "She grabbed the fatal dose of poison during that party and gave it to him in a farwell drink and it killed him.""A woman spurned is a dangerous person," said Jordan. "If she was spurned, then you can find the motive for this crime."Defense Counsel pointed to testimony of relatives of Dr. Dean, who said she was at home the night Dr.
Kennedy was stricken and was preparing her trousseau for her wedding to Capt. Franklin C. Mauli, a Delaware ship pilot.But Jordan questioned why Capt.
Mauli "did not come here in August when his fiancée was in trouble?"
and said the arrested engagement of Dr. Dean and Capt. Mauli was "a side issue" with "no bearing on this lawsuit."FINNEY'S SECRETARY GIVEN

Counts in Connection With Kansas Bond Forgeries.Special to the Post-Dispatch.
TOPEKA, Kan., March 3.—Leland
Caldwell, found guilty recently on 40 counts growing out of the Kansas forged bond scandal, today was sentenced by Judge Otis E. Hungates to a minimum of 40 years in the State penitentiary.Under the sentence the maximum for all of the 40 counts would be 840 years.Caldwell was confidential secretary to Ronald Finney, charged with forging bonds. Finney was sentenced on Jan. 3 to 31 and not more than 635 years.

BONUS FOR BERLIN PARENTS

Payments to Noddy to Begin on Hitler's Birthday.BERLIN, March 3.—In an effort to boost Germany's population, State Medical Counsellor Klein last night announced that the city of Berlin will pay needy parents a monthly bonus, beginning April 20, birthday of Chancellor Hitler.The bonus will amount to 30 marks a month for the first year and 20 marks a month for the following 18 years, for every third child of a "hereditarily healthy family."5 KILLED WHEN

Service Stops — Several Minor Traffic Accidents
in St. Louis Area.Five persons were killed and two injured when their automobile collided with a truck on Illinois Highway No. 1, about 140 miles east of St. Louis, last night in a dense white fog which enveloped Missouri, Illinois, Ohio and several other states, creating traffic hazards.The dead, all from Carmi, Ill., were: Norwood Stone, 18 years old,
his wife, Maxine, 17, Virginia Stone, 16, and Mary Ellen Stone, 14, sisters of Norwood Stone, and Mrs.
Gertrude Cochran, 42, mother of Mrs. Maxine Stone. Mrs. Clyde Stone, wife of the Carmi Postmaster and mother of three of the victims, suffered a compound fracture of the leg. Juanita Vestch, 16 years old, also of Carmi, suffered burns and scalp wounds.The fog, which was reported as far east as Philadelphia and south to central Mississippi this morning, was caused by condensation of moisture in warm air passing over ground chilled by recent snows. Air service, both mail and passenger, was grounded throughout the middle west during the night, but was expected to be resumed about noon.
Highway travel was extremely dangerous.The fatal accident in Illinois occurred six miles south of Gray-ville as the group from Carmi was returning home from a basketball game at Grayville at 10:30 o'clock.
The automobile crashed head on into a truck loaded with sweet potatoes, and both machines caught fire.Two men on the truck, Harland Douthitt and Lawrence Land, both of Carlisle, Ind., extricated the dead and injured from the burning machine. Stone and his sister, Mary Ellen, were killed outright. Mrs.
Maxine Stone and Mrs. Cochran died a few minutes after reaching a hospital in Carmi. Virginia Stone died at the hospital early today of burns.Douthitt and Land, who were unhurt, said they did not see lights on the Stone automobile, a small coach.Stone and his wife both attended Carmi High School, Stone being a member of the school basketball team.The fog began in low sections of St. Louis County and city parks about 9 o'clock last night and grew steadily more dense. Traffic along the highway was slowed to minor automobile accidents were attributed to the poor visibility. The fog continued to hang over this section during the morning, although visibility increased considerably as the sun tried to shine through.Three Killed in Auto and Truck Crash Near Fulton, Mo.FULTON, Mo., March 3.—Three men from Warrensburg were killed early today on United States Highway No. 40, northwest of here, when an automobile and a truck collided head-on.The three, Willard Marr, John Lisac and Olin Sturke, were returning home from St. Louis when the accident occurred about 1:30 o'clock on the Cedar Creek Bridge on the Boone-Calloway County line. A heavy fog is thought to have been responsible for the crash.The driver of the truck, Gale Poe of St. Louis, was taken to a hospital in Columbia. His condition is serious.Poe, it was learned here, told hospital attaches that the automobile was on the left side of the highway when the automobile and truck crashed. Poe is a driver for Brashear Truck Lines of St.
Louis.The automobile was so badly demolished that it was impossible to determine whether the car was a coupe or a sedan. One of the victims was killed. The car and another thrown 35 feet.Marr worked for his father, Kenneth Marr, in a Warrensburg drug store. Lisac and Sturke were employed at the Galloway Garage there.Air Traffic Suspended From Cheyenne to New York.CHICAGO, March 3.—The airport postoffice here announced this morning that a heavy fog had suspended, since late last evening, all air traffic in the area extending from New York City to Cheyenne, Wyo., and from Kansas City to Milwaukee.ROOSEVELT ORDER

Bargaining Clause.By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, March 3.—President Roosevelt today issued an executive order to speed up the handling of industrial violations under the collective bargaining provisions of the recovery law directing the NRA compliance board to act on the findings of the National Labor Board without reviewing them.Immediately after the order was issued, the Labor Board cited four companies to appear March 12 and 13, to show cause why their cases should not be referred immediately to the compliance board and the Department of Justice.The four concerns, all accused of violating the collective bargaining provision of the industrial law, are: Harriman Hosiery Mills, Harriman, Tenn.; A. Roth & Co., Chicago; Dresner & Son, Inc., Chicago, together with two subsidiary companies, and Patrick, Inc., Duluth, Minn.The President also increased the membership of the Labor Board from eight to 13 to insure more regular attendance of a sufficient number of both industrial and labor members, and named two vice-presidents to preside in place of Senator Wagner (Dem.), New York, who frequently is not able to give sufficient time to the work of the board.Clay Williams of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Leon Marshall, Baltimore, are the two new vice-presidents. The three new industrial members are: Ernest Draper, Brooklyn; Henry Dennison, Framingham, Mass., and Gerard Swope, New York.

shows an increase of 21 per cent over that of March 4, last year. Our January and February sales of this year are more than double those of the corresponding months last year. Our general business shows an unbroken increase in sales over last year from July 1, 1933, to the present time.

Keeping Employees Busy.

"A wholesale grocery company reports: 'Our business compared with that of March 4 a year ago, is very much improved. As for the number of employees compared with a year ago, we haven't taken on many additional employees for the simple reason that a year ago we were carrying 20 per cent more employees in all departments than we needed and the volume of business has just reached the point where it is keeping that force busy. If it continues to improve however, we will have to employ quite a much larger force, especially in our warehouse.'

"A department store writes: 'For the last six months of the year, we had a substantial increase in sales volume, number of transactions and in the number of people we employ. We are very glad to report that this increased volume has been progressively larger each month for the last four months.'

"A lumber company writes that its particular business is always the last to improve and while it has shown about 30 per cent increase in comparison with the same date a year ago, the business is far from normal.

"A manufacturer of electric goods writes: 'Our business like many others is dependent on building and that, of course, has not as yet started.'

"A sash and door company writes: 'On account of the adverse conditions in the building industry, our company cannot make a very favorable report. However, on March 2, 1933, we were employing 161 in our St. Louis plant and on Feb. 15, 1934, records show employment of 173.' The letter went on to state that 'Unless some financial arrangement is worked out to provide the necessary help for those wanting to remodel, or repair small homes, I do not look for any great improvement in our industry.'

Roosevelt's Answer.

"Let me answer all three of these letters by quoting from an article in the daily papers yesterday relating to the three lines of business. President Roosevelt in a message to Congress advocating the guaranteeing of payments of principal as well as interest on home loan bonds suggested this would facilitate the extending of credit and assistance for the modernization and further repair of homes.

"These testimonials are only a few of those indicating a change for the better in business conditions, that have flooded my office in the last few days, and have been selected at random. They show a pick-up in practically all lines of local business, and merely verify such reports on the country's business as are being released by statistical organizations.

Gains in Car Loadings.

"The general tenor of all these reports on business may be properly summed up in a report from a local railroad association which covers business in general.

"That the national recovery program has brought about improvement in the business handled at the St. Louis gateway by this association, which comprises in its membership about one-half the railroad mileage in the United States—therefore, a good barometer of general business conditions—is evidenced by the following figures: Traffic decreased constantly for four years, touching bottom in the first four months of 1932. The last eight months of 1933 showed an increase of 55,000 loads as compared with the same period in 1932, and this ratio of increase has continued through January and February, 1934, necessitating the return to service of a number of furloughed employees.

"And so, ladies and gentlemen, in the name of St. Louis I am proud and happy to say 'President Roosevelt, on this anniversary of your inauguration it gives me great pleasure to report for St. Louis that your national recovery plans are now definitely a success.'

Drug Store Robbed of $168.

Two young robbers held up the clerks in a drug store at 2771 Gravois avenue last night and escaped with $168. They forced the clerks, Virgil Carlisle and Arthur Clary, to lie on the floor behind a counter while they rifled the cash registers. As they were about to depart, Dr. John Doube, 1141 Bellevue boulevard, entered the store and, at pistol point, was forced to lie down beside the clerks.

DR. WYNEKOOP BREAKS DOWN ON WITNESS STAND

Woman Physician Becomes III After Beginning Second Day's Testimony at Murder Trial.

DENIES SHE KILLED DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Neither Chloroformed Nor Shot Her, She Declares—Disclaims 'Confession' Made to Police.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 3.—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, 63-year-old physician, broke down on the witness stand today in her trial for the murder of her young daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynekoop.

Court was recessed. The defendant was removed in her wheelchair, but 24 minutes later she was wheeled back and Judge Harry B. Miller ordered the milling spectators to take their seats.

Dr. Wynekoop was lifted back to the witness stand. She was pale and trembling as she fought for composure.

When the brief recess was taken, Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty had been taking her question by question, through a statement she made to police after the inquest. Suddenly Dr. Wynekoop turned to Judge Miller and called to him in a low voice. He did not hear her immediately, and Defense Attorney W. W. Smith jumped to his feet, pointing to the woman.

The judge ordered the jury removed. As they filed out, Dr. Wynekoop leaned over to one side, gasping for breath.

After a consultation between Judge Miller and counsel for both sides, the witness was brought in and Dr. Wynekoop was wheeled from the courtroom.

Dougherty quickly concluded his cross-examination. Dr. Wynekoop left the stand and court was adjourned to Monday. In all, the defendant was on the stand one hour and 40 minutes this morning.

Yesterday's Testimony; She Denies Killing.

Late yesterday Dr. Wynekoop denied any guilty knowledge of the killing and repudiated a signed statement which she made to police saying the young woman died of chloroform during treatment in the doctor's basement surgery and that the "Dr. Wynekoop" shot her in the back "to cover up a professional mistake."

She charged that police and prosecutors got her to sign the statement on the promise that her son, Earle, widower of the slain woman, would be released from custody.

Once during the long session in the witness box, Dr. Wynekoop suffered an emotional relapse. That was when she told how she had found the body. Tears came to her eyes. She gasped for breath, and seemed near collapse, only to rally and go on with her testimony. Afterward in her quarters in the county jail she fainted, but was quickly revived.

Death a "Mystery" to Her.

"I neither shot nor chloroformed Rheta," she testified. How her daughter-in-law met her death was as much of a mystery to her as to anyone, she insisted.

The defendant insisted that the "confession" was the brain child of police interrogators.

She resisted making the statement, she said, telling the authorities, "I can't do it because I didn't do it."

The Assistant State's Attorney asked her, she said, "Couldn't you say you gave Rheta an anesthetic to perform a minor operation?"

She told him "Rheta Wynekoop didn't need an operation, and I never gave an anesthetic alone in my life."

"They told me," she said, "that the worst I'd be guilty of, if I made the statement they suggested, was an indiscretion—bad judgment."

Dr. Wynekoop testified that Police Captain John Stege had said, in urging that she make such a statement, that "it would not even be for an indictment," that it involved no crime.

Attempt to See Son.

Dr. Harry Hoffman, Cook County psychiatrist, had told her that her son had confessed the killing. She signed her admission, Dr. Wynekoop said as Defense Attorney Smith read the end of the direct examination.

"Did he say to you that Earle wanted to confess your part?" "He words to that effect. He said, 'Now tell your story. You'll feel better just as Earle does and he wants you to tell all you know about it.'"

"What did you reply?" "I said I wanted to see Earle, and he was brought."

Earle was allowed to stay for only a moment, she said.

Prosecutor Dougherty took up the questioning here, referring to the day of killing.

"Did you not remember, she said, "that the center drawer of the office desk was open or closed?"

"It was in this drawer that you

VICTIM IDENTIFIES ALLEGED KIDNAPER AT ALBANY TRIAL

John J. O'Connell Jr. Points to Manney Strew as Man Who Said 'You'll Need a Go-Between.'

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 3.—Lieut. John J. O'Connell Jr., on the witness stand in the trial of Manney Strew, named three more men today as participating in his kidnapping last July. They were John and Francis Oley, and Percy Geary, all fugitives.

O'Connell pointed at Manney Strew yesterday and told the jury "that man right there" was one of his kidnapers.

O'Connell, after relating the details of the kidnapping and the captivity, said a man came into the room and said "you'll need a go-between."

"Can you identify that man," he was asked. "Yes, that man right there."

Strew, cursing, cried: "You are a liar. I saved your life and you're trying to hang me."

"Officers move up and keep the defendant quiet," Judge Earl H. Gallup ordered.

"I was under the corner of a bandage over my eyes," O'Connell testified after identifying Strew.

Young O'Connell, whose story of the kidnapping never was told before yesterday, outlined his abduction in detail. He had not wanted to identify the man, but when he saw the ransom letters which came from the man, he was forced to do so.

After a date "with my girl, Mary Fahney," he said, he drove home, and as he stopped his car in front of the house, the gang "snatched" him. Chained in a truck he was driven through the night to New York City. There, fastened to a bed with a handcuff, he was held captive until $40,000 ransom money was paid. The kidnapers originally demanded $250,000.

When O'Connell, a National Guard officer, nephew of Ed and Dan O'Connell, Democratic leaders, finishes his direct testimony he will face a cross-examination by Daniel P. Ryan, a lawyer who has promised to "defend some of the people in this trial very grievously."

Samuel B. Gross, who described himself as a knit goods salesman of Toronto, testified yesterday he used Strew and Fred Ziegler, a New York hotel, discuss the kidnapping of O'Connell five months before the abduction.

Ziegler, Gross explained, was "in one of the big mobs." The witness added he "was making up" to the gang to find out who robbed his friend, George Wood of Toronto, of $75,000 worth of furs.

The state could attempt to send him to the electric chair.

At the two court hearings he attended, the outlaw was manacled to a deputy and the courtroom was heavily guarded.

Extra precautions were taken at Lima, O., today, where Dillinger's three companions—Harry Pierpont, Russell Clark and John Makley—were being awaiting trial for the murder of the sheriff.

Dillinger's Record; Sheriff Killed in Break at Lima, O.

Dillinger, who was 30 years old, was paroled in 1933, from the Indiana State prison to which he had been sentenced for a store robbery in Mooresville, Ind.

He was arrested in Dayton, O., Sept. 22, 1933, in the home of a sister of James Earl Ray, who on Sept. 28, escaped with nine others from the Michigan City (Ind.) prison.

When Dillinger was arrested in Dayton he was found to possess maps of the country surrounding Michigan City and maps showing the fastest way out of several other cities in Indiana and Ohio.

In his room were four pistols, a rifle, a shotgun, two suitcases full of ammunition and several hundred roofing tanks. Police in Indiana and Ohio recently had had trouble pursuing robbers' cars because of roofing tanks being scattered by the fugitives during the chase. He had $2694 in new currency with him.

Identified in Bank Robberies.

At Dayton he was identified by victims in the following robberies: $21,000 holdup of the Massachusetts Avenue Bank at Indianapolis, Ind.; $35,000 holdup of a New Carlisle (O.) bank; $24,000 holdup of a Farwell (Pa.) bank; $2800 holdup of a Bluffton (O.) bank.

For the Bluffton robbery he was turned over to Sheriff Jess Sarber of Allen County, Ohio, Sept. 28, and while awaiting trial he was delivered.

On Oct. 21 three men entered the jail at Lima, O., told Sheriff Sarber they were officials from Michigan City, Ind., and wanted to see Dillinger.

Asked by Sheriff Sarber for their credentials, one produced a pistol and shot Sarber in the abdomen, exclaiming, "There's our credentials."

While Mrs. Sarber and a deputy looked on, the man then beat Sarber in the head with a pistol, and until the Sheriff was prostrate on the floor.

They delivered Dillinger and locked Mrs. Sarber and the deputy in the jail cell block. They escaped in two waiting automobiles.

On Sept. 26, while Dillinger was

PAT O'SHOCKER CHARGED WITH GIVING BAD CHECK

Warrant Says Wrestler Didn't Have Enough Funds in Bank for $75 Payment.

A warrant charging Pat O'Shocker, wrestler and athletic equipment dealer, with issuing a check when his bank account contained insufficient funds to cover it, was issued by Prosecuting Attorney Rosecan today.

Complainant was the Victor Voland Studios and the check, the firm said, was for $75, for draperies hung in O'Shocker's office in the Mart Building last spring. The check was issued May 11, according to the information, O'Shocker, the warrant says, lives at 4515 Maryland avenue, and is president of Patgeo, Inc., of which George Horne is vice-president.

Penalty for issuance of a check with insufficient funds is a fine of not more than $1000, imprisonment for not more than one year or both fine and imprisonment.

ALDERMEN WANT TRANSFERS ON EXPRESS BUS LINES

Resolution Voted Following Complaints Since 10-Cent Fare Permit Was Granted.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the Public Service Co. to issue transfers to street cars and other busses from its Page, Lindell, Delmar and Walnut Park express bus lines.

A copy of the resolution was ordered sent to the Board of Public Service Co. a permit to operate the express lines for a 10-cent fare without transfers. The permit was granted on recommendation of Director of Streets and Sewers McDevitt, who reported there was no objection at public hearings.

Alderman Golden, who introduced the resolution, said that complaints had been numerous since the permit was granted.

The board also approved an ordinance giving priority to a year of grace or payment of benefit judgments for the North Twelfth boulevard widening and permitting them to pay in annual installments over a period of nine years. The ordinance bears a 6 per cent interest following the year of grace. No judgments have been entered.

HELD FOR SHOOTING DEPUTY, TUNNELS WAY OUT OF JAIL

Prisoner, 19, Pries Apart Cell Bars at Carlyle, Ill., With Pipe

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARLYLE, Ill., March 3.—Thomas Davis, 19 years old, held here on a charge of assault to kill, pried apart the bars of his cell last night by prying the bars of his cell apart with a drain-pipe wrench from the wall, and tunneling through a brick wall. Police of Missouri and Illinois were alerted by the escape.

Davis is alleged to have shot Deputy Sheriff Donnwald with the deputy's own pistol, when he was arrested near Carlyle on suspicion early this year. He is also said to be sought in Pittsburg, Pa., home, for questioning in a murder case.

Baby Revived With Inhalator.

Richard, 8-month-old son of Patrolman Lawrence Herbig, 6710 Terry avenue, strangling as a result of whooping cough and pneumonia yesterday, was revived after he was brought to the hospital by his mother, who used an inhalator for an hour and a half. He was taken to Children's Hospital.

In jail at Dayton, 10 convicts were delivered from the prison at Michigan City.

Dillinger is suspected by Indiana State police of the robbery of the Daleville (Ind.) Commercial Bank of $3500 on July 17, 1933, and of the robbery of the Montpelier (Ind.) National Bank of $12,000 on Aug. 5, 1933.

Involved Trap in Chicago.

In mid-Minnesota, Indiana and Chicago police set a trap for him at a physician's office where he was going for treatment. Dillinger, apparently aware of waiting police, hurriedly jumped in his automobile along with a woman companion and fled amid a hail of bullets while the woman fired at pursuing officers. His bullet-punctured automobile later was found abandoned.

Mary Kinder, one of the women taken with the gang when arrested in Tucson, Arizona, after being held for some time, recently was released by Indiana authorities.

It was a hotel fire which led to the arrest of the Dillinger gang at Tucson, Jan. 25. Two firemen recognized pictures in a detective magazine of Charles Makley and Russell Clark as two men they had aided from a burning hotel two days before. They tipped the police. Clark was taken at a house with a woman identified as Opal Long; Makley was seized in a downtown store. John Pierpont and a woman were apprehended at a tourist camp. Dillinger walked into a police trap set at a house where Clark was caught. A large amount of money, many weapons, and much ammunition was found with the gang. Pierpont submitted to arrest willingly at the tourist camp. Later he suddenly drew two pistols at the police station, but was quickly subdued.

Department of Justice Will Aid in the Search.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Investigative facilities of the Department of Justice will be employed in the search for John Dillinger. J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Division of Investigation, said that although Dillinger was not wanted on any Federal charge, the department had worked toward his original capture. His activities would be renewed now.

TO BUILD ADDITION TO STATEVILLE PRISON

Illinois Welfare Head Says Expansion Is Necessary to Prevent Further Crowding.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 3.—A. L. Bowen, Director of Public Welfare, yesterday announced that preliminary plans are being made for construction of an addition to Stateville Penitentiary at Joliet.

Expansion is necessary to prevent further overcrowding of the Stateville and Joliet prisons, Bowen said.

"At the present time there are 3527 prisoners in Stateville, the normal capacity of which is only 3000, and the old prison, built to house not more than a thousand inmates, now has a population of 1752," Bowen said.

"These figures indicate the imperative necessity for an early program of expansion at Stateville. A new unit should be erected there to accommodate at least 1500 prisoners at the start, with provision for taking care of an additional thousand when required."

One suggestion under consideration is to use the west Stateville wall as the beginning of a new enclosure.

KANSAS CITY FUSIONISTS WIN SKIRMISH IN COURT

Judge Refuses to Deny Election Supplies to Republican Allies

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 3.—The fusion movement directed toward ousting the Pendergast Democratic organization from the city hall in the spring elections won a court victory last night.

Certain representatives of the Republican party sought to have Republican election judges and clerks favoring the Fusionist or Citizens ticket denied election supplies. Circuit Judge Brown Harris denied an injunction application, dismissing the case on motion of Republican Election Commissioners. Many Republicans, including the chairman of the Jackson County Republican Committee, have announced support of the Fusionist movement.

COUNTY GRAND JURY BEGINS KELLEY KIDNAPING INQUIRY

First Witness Is Former Justice of Peace Who Has Named 9 Alleged Participants.

The St. Louis County grand jury, impaneled last Saturday, today began its investigation of the kidnapping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley on April 20, 1931.

First witness was Adolph Fiedler, former Maplewood Justice of the Peace, whose version of the crime, published exclusively in the Post-Dispatch on Feb. 7, led to the inquiry. Fiedler named eight men and a woman as participants in the abduction, which he declared was planned in a series of conferences at a recreation parlor he then operated at North-and-South and Olive street roads.

CHICAGO ADVERTISING MAN KILLED BY MACHINE GUNNER

President of Agency Fired on From Auto as He Is Driven to Office.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 3.—Eli Dalchos, 46-year-old president of the Thomas M. Bowers Advertising Agency, was shot and killed today by a machine gunner as he was being driven to his office.

The murder occurred on the outer drive running along Lake Michigan.

The murder car drove up alongside Dalchos' auto and the killer opened fire with the machine gun. Dalchos was killed instantly.

LEGLESS VENDER IS HIT AND DRAGGED BY AUTO

Charles Martin, legless candy vendor, was struck by an automobile while he was propelling himself across Grand boulevard, at Delmar boulevard at 9 o'clock last night. He was dragged a block and a half and left lying in the gutter by the driver, who went on. Martin, 51 years old, is in a serious condition at City Hospital.

Ralph Chaffin, newsboy, saw the legless man, who wears heavy pads over his thigh stumps and propels himself with his arms, swing into the street during a lull in traffic. A roadster, turned south in Grand boulevard, turned east into Delmar boulevard (formerly Morgan street). Chaffin, glancing across the street, noticed that Martin had disappeared.

Olin Mackel and Frank Kyle, attendant at a parking lot on Theresa avenue, saw a roadster, which they said was a gray Packard, turn south into Theresa avenue and stop near the center of the block. Their attention was attracted, they said, by a scraping noise. The driver, a man, got out, disengaged an object from the front bumper of the car, then drove away. A woman also was in the car.

Mackel and Kyle found Martin unconscious near the curb. Police were called and took the injured man to the hospital, where it was found he had suffered torn tendons in one arm and multiple contusions of the head, face and body. On being revived he said he lost consciousness when the machine hit him and he had no recollection of being dragged.

Martin is a familiar figure in the Grand boulevard theater district. When he was 14 years old he fell from a tree and broke his legs. He "hopped" a ride, and his legs were amputated near the hips. He lives at 7175 Hunter avenue, Pine Lawn.

DR. REINHOLD NIEBUHR SAYS 'WE'RE HEADED FOR DISASTER'

Declares "Good People, Looking Out for Own Interests, Make Catastrophe Inevitable."

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., March 3.—Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of ethics at the Union Theological Seminary, New York, told the Progressive Education Association last night that "we are really in a stream of world history headed for disaster."

"There is no great conflict of social wills here," he said, "we have no great Tory movement. No great radical movement. Ogden Mills speaks once in a while but it is out of a page of the old liberal history, showing a great deal of skill in being on his way." The President, he said, is neither a Fascist nor a Socialist.

"All the good people—not vicious people, but good people—are looking out for their own interests, making the catastrophe we face inevitable," he said. "Nations all looking out for themselves, trying to sell more than they will buy, nations and constitutionally hypocritical. This is international anarchy and the inevitable result is war."

PLANS OF WABASH RAILWAY FOR USE OF $1,481,000 LOAN

Most of FWA Advance to Be Spent on Rolling Stock and Air-Conditioning.

Plans for the expenditure of a FWA loan of $1,481,000 to the Wabash Railroad were announced yesterday by the receivers, Norman E. Pitts and Frank C. Nicodemus Jr.

About $916,000 of the loan, they said, would be used to rebuild and repair rolling stock and to air-condition passenger equipment. This work, they said, would require the employment of 240 additional mechanics in the shops at Decatur, Ill. The work is to begin late this month and continue until December. The shop payroll will be increased from about $35,000 a month to $66,000 a month, and it is the expectation of the receivers that virtually all the men held on in recent months will be re-employed.

About 10,000 tons of steel are to be laid in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. The new rails and equipment will cost about $564,700, and the expenditure for the steel will be about $100,000, chiefly for labor and the mortar.

Brentwood's Bond Issues.

THE needs of the City of Brentwood are proper fire protection and sewers. I note with interest that the city administration has made application to the FWA for a loan and grant to construct a city hall and engine house, to purchase fire-fighting equipment and to install public sanitary sewers. The success of the movement depends on the special election to be held March 6, when the voters will be asked to approve three bond issue propositions, namely: A city hall and engine house (including site), $300,000; fire-fighting apparatus and equipment, $12,500; and sewers, $65,000. A fourth question will be the ratification of a franchise with the St. Louis County Water Co. By approving the bond issue propositions and ratifying the franchise, the citizens of Brentwood can take a great step forward. The saving to home owners on water and fire insurance rates will in most cases more than pay the 20-cent tax for interest and sinking fund. Every Brentwood voter should have sufficient civic pride to help put these propositions over by voting "Yes" next Tuesday.

CIVIC BOOSTER.

School Influence in Politics.

NO more can it be said that our school system is free of politics. In the recent school tax election, with teachers as tabulators in the polling places, with contributions from school principals and teachers toward the tax campaign fund as friends of the schools, all gave the inference that there was something "to save." No ward politician could go to greater lengths to hold on to the patronage of a departing political party than was witnessed in the school tax election. It is to be hoped that our Board of Education will now become the democratic institution it ought to be, and the conscripts of the various bodies that petition it for redress of grievances.

A Housewife on Smoke.

IT is 9 o'clock in the morning (Feb. 27) although it seems to be night outside. I have just stopped washing. It seems to be so futile. The smoke in the air will make the wash all grey before it dries. If there were any way to move to a clean city, I and thousands of housewives like myself would leave this city. Who knows, perhaps we shall find a way like our other friends who have gone away. Small wonder that St. Louis becomes less important with each census and yearly grows in importance as an ear, nose and throat center for physicians. Real estate men and City Hall politicians, wake up! Here's your chance! Right now, while everyone is smoke-conscious, get started and don't stop when spring comes and washes our air for us. The smoke gets worse each year. Ask the housewives who play nurse to smoke-ridden bodies and fill-lodged curtains. There have been offered many plans for the cleaning of our city. Few of them cost big money. We have just about finished spending $37,000,000 for widening streets and erecting beautiful buildings, but when our eyes are smarting and our noses burning, to say nothing of what is happening to our lungs, we cannot appreciate the beautiful buildings, were they the prizes of the world's architecture. My prediction is that our next Mayor will be the one that is instrumental in doing away with smoke. Let us start now a campaign to put into office a man who will make the smoke disappear. Mr. Dickmann, how do you like your job?

OLGA RYAN.

Mr. Hay and the Price of Gas.

ADMIRE City Counselor Hay for his courage in defending the public against the exploitation of the Laclede Gas Light Co. Our children need nourishing food, economically prepared. This cannot be accomplished with exorbitant gas rates. All honor to Mr. Hay for his broad vision in considering the needs of the people.

MRS. HEDWIG SEIL.

The Meanest Editorial.

TO the Editor of the Post-Dispatch: I SEE the National Economy League is back in the saddle, cracking the whip, and that you are printing its commands. Of all the bitter, despairing, biased, distorted, half-truth editorials I ever read in any paper, not barring the Dearborn Independent in its heyday, yours on "Resumption of the Pension Racket" is the meanest, most unfair. As soon as capitalism learns the cost of ITS war includes taking care of the veterans who have become disabled, as well as the cost of the powder and shot, it may hesitate a little and count the cost before the battle, not afterward. I don't believe you have the courage or decency to print this. DR. K. L. BUECHELE, Post Surgeon, Post 2365, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

ST. LOUIS' HOSPITAL NEEDS.

In the proposed $16,100,000 bond issue, to be submitted to the voters May 15, the largest item is $7,000,000 for building and equipping hospitals and other eleemosynary institutions. From time to time, the citizens of St. Louis have been informed of our hospital needs, but it now becomes timely to sum them up. Incidentally, one of the most glaring deficiencies of our hospital system—a modern hospital for Negro patients—was remedied last November, when the voters, by an 11-to-1 majority, approved a $1,500,000 bond issue, insuring the new Negro hospital's completion.

One of the main troubles with our hospital system as a whole is that it has been outgrown by the city's increase in population. Last November, Hospital Commissioner Thompson prepared the following table to show hospital capacity as against patients actually under care at that time:

	Capacity	Under Care
City Sanitarium	1,300	1,300
City Infirmary	875	1,023
City Hospital No. 1	800	888
Isolation Hospital	225	171
Robert Koch Hospital	350	800
St. Louis Training School	450	562

It will be seen that the only institution not overpopulated just now is the Isolation Hospital, used for contagious diseases and particularly necessary at times of epidemics, when as many as 290 patients have been packed into it. At such times, it becomes the most important of all the hospitals, because it serves to protect the community from diseases which might otherwise become major plagues. Isolation Hospital is 17 years old and is not well planned for safe care of contagious cases. It needs remodeling so that children may be separated from adults, women from men, and to prevent danger of cross-infection. City Sanitarium offers the worst example of overcrowding, containing now nearly 50 per cent more patients than it was designed to hold. Unless extensions are made, it will become necessary to send patients to State institutions for the insane. It has become impossible, in this swarming place, to render adequate medical care to the patients. Hospital Commissioner Thompson believes extensions should take the colonization form on ample land space, in accordance with modern views on treatment of the insane. In any case, immediate relief of one kind or another is essential.

At this point, it should be emphasized that the foregoing table does not present the entire picture of overcrowding in St. Louis hospitals. In nearly every instance, patients are being turned away or kept indefinitely on waiting lists, or being released after too short a period of convalescence. In the case of Robert Koch Hospital for treatment of tuberculosis, there is always a waiting list of several hundred open cases, where life frequently hangs upon obtaining admission. More than 100 persons are on the waiting list of the City Infirmary, or poorhouse. So that, on the basis of adequate hospital care for all the sick and unfortunate who need it, the city is far behind.

Our general hospital, City Hospital No. 1, needs a great many improvements. We cite the inadequate operating room facilities, lack of room for confinement cases, the poorly-arranged children's ward, the disgraceful condition of the observation ward, overcrowding of the Clinic Building, from which on some days as many as 300 to 400 patients needing attention have to be turned away, and the need for additional quarters for employees and additional facilities for kitchen, laundry and other service departments.

To say that Koch Hospital is overcrowded already, that it has a waiting list of several hundred, that 200 tubercular patients are being housed in other hospitals awaiting transfer, is quite enough. Tubercular patients need ample room, good food and peace of mind. How they can obtain the latter in Robert Koch Hospital is beyond us. The city should have a tubercular sanitarium worthy of the name, one in which persons so afflicted have an opportunity to beat back to health in the shortest possible time.

We have already alluded to the Isolation Hospital, and we conclude this short survey with mention of the St. Louis Training School for feeble-minded children which, though it is only about 10 years old, has filled such a great need that its facilities have long been overtaxed. Two dormitories for Negro children are needed, another school house, additional employees' quarters and so on.

St. Louis has never voted for a bond issue so important as this one, for, in addition to the vitally needed public works it is destined to construct, its primary purpose is to put St. Louis into the struggle for national recovery and against the curse of unemployment. Moreover, if it is passed, the city will obtain outright Federal grants of nearly $5,000,000. If the 11-to-1 Negro hospital vote and the 3½-to-1 vote on the school tax are criteria, the public works bond issue will be ratified by a huge majority.

PULLING IN THE WELCOME SIGN.

The American actor now asks protection against unfair competition from abroad. These foreigners come here and take the bread out of the mouth of the native artist—not only the bread but the linens, the glittering roadster, the modest little 30-room farm house and the marble-tiled old swimming hole. Well, when Uncle Sam looks the door against the foreign actor, let us hope he'll toss an icy glance at the British lecturer, too, which, interpreted, reads, "This means you."

MR. THROOP FACES ABOUT.

Addison J. Throop's change of front in the St. Clair County tax graft case did not impress Circuit Judge Joyce of East St. Louis. Characterizing it as "trifling with the court and justice," Judge Joyce has sentenced the former chairman of the County Tax Board, on his plea of guilty to participation in a bribery conspiracy, to one to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of $3000. Throop's counsel has announced that it will appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court, where the issue will be whether the Circuit Judge should have refused to permit Throop to change his plea from guilty to not guilty, as the latter recently requested.

Meanwhile, on the face of what has been disclosed, the public will, in our opinion, continue to believe Throop's first account. In that instance, he confessed voluntarily and freely. He told it all to the Attorney-General of the State and then went to jail of his own accord. In order, he said in effect, to atone for his wrong-doing. That was almost a year ago, and much may have happened since then to induce him to change his mind. State's Attorney Zerweck's statement that he believes it was caused by the influence of the other defendants makes it necessary for the State to leave no stone unturned in seeing that justice is done.

No man should be sentenced to the penitentiary unless he is guilty and, on the other hand, threats of bodily harm to material witnesses cannot be tolerated if our court system is to endure.

THE TARIFF MESSAGE.

President Roosevelt has asked Congress for more power—for authority to modify tariff rates in order to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with other nations. This authority would be limited as to time, the period of its duration being fixed at three years. The extent of change in any rate would be restricted to 50 per cent, either up or down. The bill in preparation, it is explained, will not permit the transfer of any article from the free list to the dutiable list, or vice versa.

The message presents the case plausibly, one might say convincingly. Our exports in 1933 were but 62 per cent of the 1929 volume and, in value, 33 per cent. World trade all along the line has shriveled, but in our case the shrinkage has been most marked. The consequences have been far-reaching. Agriculture has suffered severely. Cotton, wheat and hog products are specially listed. The revival of those industries and the vast areas involved in their production is indispensable to any well-rounded program of recovery. Such revival is possible only through markets which will absorb the surplus.

Those markets cannot be found by any voyages of discovery. The way to them lies through equitable trade agreements. The power to make such agreements promptly must be lodged somewhere. The executive office is the logical place. That, in sum, is the argument.

Congress is informed that other nations are building up their foreign trade by such agreements, through agencies similarly empowered to act. Our country is helpless to meet the situation under the rigid tariff law that precludes anything like quick action. The urgency demands flexibility; requires authority freed from the shackles of delay.

The President pledges himself to proceed with caution, keeping in mind all interests, safeguarding all industries as far as practicable, but frankly acknowledging that some unhappy effects must ensue. He admits that, in the working out of the plan, the welfare of the majority must take precedence over that of any individual industry.

Objection has already been raised. Mr. Snell, the Republican House leader, declares Republicans will be against it "to the bitter end." He says, "It would be the greatest political weapon ever held by one man"; that "it would give him the power to wipe out any manufacturing company now receiving protection."

That is probably true. The point is competent if the assumption is permissible that the President of the United States would so betray his authority as wantonly to destroy any business concern. That assumption, we submit, is not decently tenable.

The question is, is the President's proposal the best way to put our agriculture on the way to recovery, to revive foreign trade, to start squarely back on the road to normal?

Public opinion has profound confidence in President Roosevelt. It has sanctioned all the powers delegated to him. It will, we believe, endorse this latest request.

EMBARRASSING THE MAYOR.

State Representatives Blong, Fontana, Hess and O'Reilly have resigned the city jobs to which they were appointed under the Dickmann administration. This, according to one of them, was to save embarrassment to the Mayor. Inasmuch as the City Charter states that no employee of the city may hold State or Federal office, it would seem clear that they had no other choice than to decide whether they preferred to work for the city or to sit in the Legislature. Now that this has been straightened out, Mayor Dickmann will do well to look over the city payroll and make the changes necessary to bring it in line with the Missouri anti-neo-politism statute, which forbids a public official from appointing a relative to office. The anti-neo-politism statute, like the City Charter provision, is designed to prevent abuse of public office. It, too, should be enforced.

DR. WOMAN LEADS.

It is good to know that Dr. Leo Wolman, who has borne much of the load of the National Labor Board, will continue to serve on that highly important agency of the recovery program. An authority on labor economics, trade unionism and arbitration proceedings, he is the very kind of informed and disinterested mediator which the board's perplexing problems require. He and Senator Wagner, the board's chairman, have been the members whose presence has done most to assure employers and employees alike of fair dealing. In the months to come, the board will have increasing need for men of light and leading and resolution if the company union issue is to be met and other issues arising under Section 7A of the Recovery Act properly handled.

As for the explanation that Dr. Wolman has resigned because a place on the National Labor Board as the chairmanship of the NRA's Labor Advisory Board "involved too great responsibility for one man," it is best answered by calling attention to the overwhelming duties of Secretary of the Interior Ickes. Fulfillment of the New Deal requires no end of sacrifice by public-spirited men and women, and the way in which many of them are giving themselves to it is one of its most heroic aspects.

Father Coughlin says April will be the zero hour for war, which is mighty short notice for the people who are to fight and have yet to find it out.

PAGE SHERLOCK!

Mystery: An occupational tax for use of city streets and alleys is paid by the local electric and telephone companies, but not by the gas company, which is in the same category. Mr. Nolte, moreover, says there is nothing to show that it has ever been asked to pay. It is different now.

The Laclede Co. has received from City Counselor Hay a bill for $375,860.24, covering the occupational tax for the four years 1929-32. He cannot bill the company for previous years because the statute of limitations has run.

Why Laclede has never been billed before is something nobody seems to know. It is a case for Sherlock Holmes.

Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania is going to run for the Senate against David A. Reed, and when it's all over but the shouting, you needn't be surprised to see the Aluminum Co. of America without a toga to its back.

AND A BIGGER INCOME TAX?

The Future of Bootlegging

Competition of legitimate dealers, public sentiment and authorities' desire for revenue will speedily wipe out bootlegging in wet states, editor predicts; in those with dry laws, however, he expects enforcement to be non-existent, just as before repeal; writer doubts that Federal agents will show much activity in these regions.

Louis Graves, Editor of Chapel Hill (N. C.) Weekly, in Baltimore Evening Sun.

THROUGHOUT the years of dispute preceding the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, the dries and the wets were agreed on one point: both deplored bootlegging. But they differed as to the proper method of attacking the industry.

The dries declared that the way to end it was to cut off the supply; preferably at the source, but, if that could not be done, along the line of traffic. The wets declared that the only way to put the bootleggers out of business was to destroy the demand for their outlawed product; that is, to legalize the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages so the consumer would have no reason to buy from an illicit dealer. The wets have prevailed at the polls, and the eighteenth amendment is no more. What, then, is to happen to bootlegging? Will it continue to flourish? Will it perish for lack of sustenance? Or will it survive in weakened condition, recognized as ineradicable in toto but so reduced as to be unimportant?

An acquaintance of mine from New York told me he could get good bootleg liquor in the city at a lower price than he had to pay for an equal grade of the legal article. And in the public prints, I have been reading protests against the high price of legal liquor. But this is a condition that is bound to come to an end. The self-interest of the distillers and dealers, and the urgent need of national, state and local governments for revenue, can be counted upon to attend to that.

There are a large number of people—suppose we call them the respectable wets—who will not buy liquor illegally, even though at an attractive price, when they are permitted to buy it legally. I put it down as sure, then, that in the wet states bootlegging will not flourish, permanently, on any large scale. At present, there are many speakasies, but they will be wiped out by competition and by the pressure of public sentiment in support of the revenue laws.

A very different picture faces us when we look at the states which have their own prohibition laws. In the rural regions particularly, bootlegging is a small-unit industry. But in the aggregate, it is colossal. Back in the swamps and mountain thickets, thousands of moonshiners produce liquor for which consumers pay tens of millions of dollars a year.

In the dry states—of course there are none such in fact; I mean states that have dry laws—there is every reason to suppose that bootlegging will continue to flourish. It will retain its enormous "domestic" market, and it will experience evidence enough that it has little to fear from state, county and town authorities. Election statistics may show majorities for prohibition, but in all the dry states there is a powerful anti-prohibition sentiment which puts genuine enforcement out of the question.

North Carolina got into the limelight by November by voting against repeal. Immediately after the vote, Gov. Ehringhaus gave the pious assurance that prohibition would be enforced. But nobody has been able to discern the slightest change; the testimony

San Francisco's Utilities

From the Arkansas Democrat.

THE City of San Francisco owns a street car system, water department and hydro-electric plants. Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, in a report to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors on the operation of these utilities during 1933, shows how the city has profited by its ownership.

Over 71,000,000 street car passengers were carried during 1933. Bonds have been redeemed regularly, so that the municipal railway now has outstanding only $2,000,000 of an original issue of $5,431,000 against a property conservatively valued at $12,000,000. The 5-cent fare has been retained, with transfer privileges, saving an estimated $8,000,000 yearly for the people. Aug. 30, 1933, the railway subscribed to the President's code, although it was already operating on that basis, Mayor Rossi says.

San Francisco's hydro-electric plants continue to operate at a profit, the Mayor reports. They have produced, since 1925, power in the total of $18,570,000. The net income of the plants during the past year, after deducting operating expenses and taxes, amounts to approximately $1,850,000. One plant, in addition to the power it has supplied for construction, has brought the city a cash revenue of more than $700,000. Additional revenue of about $85,000 annually is expected from installation of a new pipe line in connection with the power plants.

San Francisco's water plant has carried on "most satisfactorily." The Mayor says. "During less than four years of municipal ownership, it has shown a gross revenue from all sources of $24,754,012, with operating expenses totaling $15,677,153. This leaves a net income during that period of $9,076,859." That represents the total profit after the department had furnished water to other departments of the city equal in value to the amount of taxes previously paid by the private company.

Furthermore, a 10 per cent reduction in water rates has been ordered. It will be the first reduction in 30 years, and will save consumers $700,000 annually.

No comment is necessary. The figures say more than we could write in volumes.

THE GOVERNMENT STEPS IN.

A LONG step toward snuffing the power of the Federal Government in the detection of gangsters and racketeers is taken in the submission to Congress by Attorney General Cummings of a series of bills designed to enlarge the jurisdiction of the Federal forces and to provide co-operation with the police of the states. The measures are aimed chiefly to check kidnapping.

One of the most important, for example, would make it a criminal offense to attempt extortion by telephone, telegraph, radio, mail or oral message transmitted in interstate commerce. Another would extend the scope of the motor vehicle theft act, which would strike at cars stolen and used in robberies or kidnappings.

None of these measures proposes an American Scotland Yard, but it is believed in the Department of Justice that the Division of Investigation could build up a crime detection bureau without special legislation, while a more comprehensive scheme is worked out for the consideration of Congress.

The criminal fears Federal agents more than any other group of prosecutors, and the extraordinary success of some of them in tracking crime gives good ground for their apprehension. The country may be assured that one result of the crime wars will be the serious attempt to effect an all-round police organization through whose net few criminals will slip.

The DAILY MERRY

By BREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, March 3. THE Republican National Committee is feeling happier these days. Its sad-faced members think they have found the first real flaws in Roosevelt's hitherto impenetrable armor. . . . One is the air mail. Another is sugar. . . . When Congressional hearings were held on the Costigan sugar bill, A. J. S. Weaver, expert of the AAA, was asked regarding its purpose. Without blinking an eye, he replied, "To end the best sugar industry." . . . His chief, Secretary Wallace, previously had said that the best sugar was an ungodly industry, a burden to the housewife. . . . So now, Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, whose hat is supposed to be in the ring for the G. O. P. presidential nomination, is going to carry the fight to the sugar states. . . .

The Washington Flag Society for a time was in a pretty pickle regarding the gold medal it was planning to award to J. Edgar Hoover of the Justice Department. The medal was a reward for law enforcement. But carnation-wearing Senator Copeland moved that he medal go to Roosevelt.

Vicious Circle.

GEORGE PEEK, the Government's big banker for Russian and Cuban trade, was indignant because the Washington Post gave his age as 70. "I'm exactly sixty," protested Peek. "Never mind," concluded Harry E. Fayer, "you don't look a day over forty."

Discouraging news has reached the NRA. L. C. Fox of the National Retail Dry Goods Association reports a drop in unit volume of retail sales. Because of the depreciation of the dollar, the dollar value of retail sales is up, but actual volume is down. According to Federal Reserve experts this is bad news. It means that if retail sales continue off, factory production must drop in proportion. The latter means danger of decreased employment and decreased buying power. It is a vicious circle.

Suppress the Press!

STANLEY Hornbeck, Far Eastern chief of the State Department, "There should be no freedom of the press. It is absurd to allow the press to say the things it does."

Rivalry between George Peek and Cordell Hull has retarded Roosevelt's tariff bargaining plans. At times the atmosphere has been tense and acrid. Both strong boosters for foreign trade, but Peek's trade bargaining should be by the State Department. But Peek would set up a grandiose department as important as any in the government. Peek, however, Roosevelt will confine him to the Russian and Cuban banks.

Meyer Parodneck, youthful representative of the Emergency Conference of Consumers, was addressing an NRA protest meeting, unaware Gen. Johnson was in the room. "This show of a shake-up in the NRA is high commendation," said Parodneck. "Are you talking to the Administrator or just making a speech?" belittled Johnson, who had just entered.

Davis' Substitute.

LUIGI WILSON, Minister to Switzerland, is being groomed to replace Norman Davis, now leave as Ambassador-at-Large. Wilson will act for Davis while the latter is in the NRA high command. Davis' job altogether if he drops permanently out of the picture.

The first Washington trip of Senator Reed was for President McKinley's inauguration. Dave summed up his way as a freight train with a quarter in his pocket. The once deadly barrage of big business against Prof. Tugwell and some Frank-foremost Brain Trusters—has now abated.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR THOMAS CRANE YOUNG

Louis Architect, 78, Died Yesterday of Heart Disease.

Funeral services for Thomas Crane Young, distinguished St. Louis architect, were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of his son-in-law, Samuel Mitchell, 6 Windemere place. Mr. Young, who was 78 years old, died of heart disease yesterday at Barnes Hospital. He lived at Hotel Chase and had his office in the Arden Building where he operated a partnership with his son, William S. Young. His partner, William S. Young, died in 1915.

Surviving are his widow, the former Mrs. Lulu Norvell Wallace whom he married in 1921, and three sons of his first marriage, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. William S. Young and Webster Young, and Mrs. Donald McElvray of Pasadena, Cal.

Former Belmont Mansion Burns. NEW YORK, March 3. — Fire destroyed the 33-room mansion of the late Mrs. O. H. F. Belmont at 605 Central Park West, yesterday. The loss was estimated by fire officials at $750,000 for the house, which had been built in 1904 and had been supplied for only a few years and was then a decade. The property was owned by the Coldstream family.

VIOLINIST SPALDING PLAYS WITH SYMPHONY

Gives Satisfying Performance
— Delage's "Tryptique" Has First Performance.

By THOMAS E. SHERMAN.
ALBERT SPALDING, the celebrated American violinist, played the Bach concerto in E Major and the Poeme by Chausson with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon at the Odeon. In general his performance lacked the incisiveness of former occasions and it also seemed small and weak. Even so, the whole feet was satisfying and in many parts intensely moving due to the continuous presence of the former's fine musical sensibilities. In the first movement of the Bach concerto the composer's fluidity and profundity of feeling and variety of expression are necessary counterpoises, especially in view of the economy in material. They support one another and functionally bring together make this composition one of the miracles of music. To some extent this applies to the structure of this movement by broadening out at certain points in order to give a little more emphasis to the purely melodic elements. He was at his best in the more subjective second movement which was beautifully

The Chausson Poeme was even better suited to Mr. Spalding's frame of mind. The ecstatic quality which was present from the first was carried forward without excess and with steadily sustained interest to the high point of the curve.

At the conclusion of the Chaumontson he gave as an encore two excerpts from Bach's C Major Sonata. Mr. Spalding called in Mr. Golschmann to share the applause with him—a tactful gesture and an appropriate one—for the orchestra played an able part in both num-

The orchestra under Mr. Golschmann also earned the just applause of the audience by its playing of Maurice Delage's "Tryptique." This was a first St. Louis performance. The music was unpretentious French post-impressionism, derivative but thoroughly well organized.

and bearing the marks of a delicately adjusted esthetic sense. It was always attractive and as a whole achieved a definite singleness of effect. For the most part it was an affair of the senses—the frank appeal of romantic sounds in the night and suggestive aromas—but one that was tempered by proportion and refinement. It was one of the best novelties of the season.

The concert opened with the not often heard overture to Beethoven's "Fidelio" and ended with the "Les Préludes" and both were unusually well played. "Les Préludes" does not improve with age.

POULTRY COTTON MARKET CLOSES
9 TO 13 POINTS LOWER

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, March 3.—Cotton futures opened firm, 9 to 11 higher on Liverpool cables and increased trade. The market was active, with prices for the month of March ranging from 12.45 to 12.55. In addition to buying inspired by the firmness abroad, there appeared to be good many over-enthusiastic buyers in the market at the start, and business was active.

The advance to 12.55 for many contracts making a recovery of about 33 cents from the low of last Monday, was followed by heavy realizations, however, prices eased off some 8 or 10 points from that level under this pressure and active movement was ruling within 2 or 3 points of yesterday's closing quotations before settling.

Liverpool cable attributed buying to the progress of the market and possibilities of tariff revisions. Cotton futures closed barely steady, 12.45 to 12.55; March 12.45; July 12.50; October 12.55; December 12.55; January 12.55; February 12.55; March 12.45.

BEARS TO CLOSE BASKET SEASON IN BATTLE WITH BUTLER TONIGHT

PROBABLE LINEUPS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. (AP)—The University of Washington basketball team will close its season tonight at the Field House, playing beginning at 8:30 o'clock.

Butler made sure of the championship early this week, defeating Drake, 29 to 27, for its eighth victory in nine games. In a conference play, Washington has a 500 percentage with four victories and as many defeats.

It hasn't been such a great season for the Bears. All told, they have engaged in 18 games and have been returned winners in only seven. Thus, they possess a percentage of .389 which isn't so hot. The Bears have scored 531 points while the opposition has counted 608.

The apparent trouble with the Bears was their lack of consistency. One night, they looked like prospective champions and the next like runners-up in some Midwestern league. They played splendidly against Illinois and the Oklahoma Aggies and also were brilliant in single games against Greighton and Drake but their play dragged in most of their engagements.

Butler has had a rather easy time in winning the championship with "no one second" almost. The Hoosiers have a formidable combination they call the "five Aces" which consists of Parrish, Renssler, Chickendanz, Davis and Baird and it is probable that these Aces will start against the Bears tonight. Denman and Bates are alternate starters. Coach Don White probably will use the lineup that has started action in the last few games and send Marshall and Martintoni to the forward positions with Maysack at center and Droke and Moller at guards.

Maysack's failure to reach the form he showed in past seasons has hurt but Coach White is proud of the remarkable showings made by two of his sophomores, Roy Martintoni and "Chick" Droke. These two have been the most consistent Washington players and also have done the biggest part of the scoring in recent games.

Next week, Droke, Martintoni and Moller will join the football team in spring practice.

COUNTRY DAY TRIMS PRINCIPAL AT SOCCER

The Country Day A soccer team defeated the Principia A soccer team yesterday in the last ABO League soccer game of the season, 2 to 0. As a result of the victory Country Day finished the season in second place, holding three victories over Principia, two ties with Burroughs, and one defeat from Burroughs.

Yesterday's game was slow because of the soft, deep mud under foot, but while slow, the contest was hard fought. Landon, Jones and Max Stewart scored the goals.

CUNNINGHAM TO STRIVE FOR TWO NEW STANDARDS IN BIG 6 MEET

By the Associated Press

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 2.—The University of Missouri was the focus of athletes from five States today for the thirteenth Big Six indoor track and field championships in which meet, world, and attendance records may be smashed.

The field of 90 candidates is termed by officials the largest collection of individual stars ever to compete in the annual classic, champions in six of the 12 events in the 1933 meet are in the group. H. J. (Doc) Huff, Missouri coach, predicted that the world record in 60-yard low hurdles would "undoubtedly be broken" by Hays Ambertus, Nebraska senior, co-leader of the conference record of seven seconds, or by Joe Knapp, sophomore, first Kansas State time-barrier, 11.4 seconds.

It hasn't been such a great season for the Bears. All told, they have engaged in 18 games and have been returned winners in only seven. Thus, they possess a percentage of .389 which isn't so hot. The Bears have scored 531 points while the opposition has counted 608.

KILLS ESTRANGED WIFE AND MOTHER-IN-LAW

Dallas Man Runs Away With Child After Shooting—Later Confesses.

DALLAS, Tex., March 3.—Giles S. (Jack) Bogges, 43 years old, shot and killed his estranged wife, Gladys, 39, and her mother, Mrs. Julia Woodward, 76, here yesterday, and escaped with the 8-year-old child, Marjorie, who was found several hours later by police. Bogges was taken into custody at the home of a nephew, A. J. Lacy. He, an unemployed tailor, confessed the killings in a signed statement to police.

He declared it had been his first intention to kill himself after killing his wife, "but on second thought I wanted to live long enough to see what was going to happen to me." Bogges and his wife had been separated since Feb. 7. Yesterday afternoon he took the baby to a relative's home, where his wife was staying, and asked her to come back to him.

"I loved that baby," he said. "I had begged my wife to come back to me so that we could give the child a good home. She refused. During this time," said the statement, "the baby had been sitting in my wife's lap. The baby got out of her lap. Then I pulled out my pistol and shot her. I had been waiting for the baby to move, for I didn't want to hurt her. My wife's mother picked up a stick and started toward me and I shot her."

SPRINGS ANKLE, CALLS FIREMEN.

Answering an alarm turned in from a box at Harney and Beacon avenues early today, firemen found Thomas Green, 45 years old, 1914 Chase avenue, with a sprained ankle, but there was no fire. Green said he had injured his ankle in a fall and that he had turned in the alarm to obtain assistance when his cries were unheeded.

U. S. DOLLAR 5.08 TO POUND

LONDON, March 3.—The United States dollar, after a firm opening at 5.07 1/2 to the pound, fell to 5.07 1/2 in a quiet market, to close at 5.08 on the foreign exchange market today—1/4 cent off from the overnight quotation of 5.07 1/2. The French franc moved similarly, falling off from the overnight quotation of 77.12 to the pound to finish at 77.15.

ESTIMATE BOARD APPROVES EFFICIENCY APPROPRIATION

Ordinance Is Designed to Furnish Funds for Last Six Weeks of Fiscal Year.

Another effort to provide funds for the Efficiency Board for the remaining six weeks of the fiscal year was made yesterday when the Board of Estimate and Apportionment approved an ordinance appropriating $2600.

An item for this amount was stricken from the supplementary appropriation bill by the airmen's Ways and Means Committee last week. Some Aldermen have complained that Mayor Dickmann continued appointments through the Efficiency Board and feared that their temporary appointees would not be able to pass an examination.

Temporary employees of whom there are about 1000, must submit to examination by the Efficiency Board after 90 days. Without funds, the board cannot function.

The Board of Estimate announced that the first public hearing on the municipal budget for the fiscal year beginning April 16 would be held at the Mayor's office at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Recommendations of Park Commissioner Miller for changes in charges at the Forest Park Field House were approved by the Board of Estimate. Rental of women's lockers would be reduced from $15 to $10 a year. Men's lockers, now renting for $10, would be reduced to $7; upstairs lockers of the $5 class would be $3; and basement lockers, now $5, would be $2. A flat charge of 10 cents for shower baths was approved. Permits for one of hand ball courts near the Field House, now free, would be sold for $1.

The decapitated bodies of the two youths, who had hitch-hiked their way to Kansas in search of work, were found in the Missouri Pacific yards here July 18. Investigators concluded that they had fallen asleep with their heads on the rail and had been killed accidentally.

Prosecuting Attorney Martin F. Trued said last night that Stambach confessed while being questioned about the killing of C. C. Lavoo, locomotive engineer, at Horace in December, 1933.

Stambach was quoted as saying that he and Ware encountered the two youths at night in the railroad yards, engaged them in a quarrel, beat them into unconsciousness and then dragged their bodies to the tracks. Ware, he said, robbed one of the youths of a ring.

Stambach, arrested recently in Paola, Kan., denied any connection with the killing of Lavoo, whose body was found under conditions which led a coroner's jury to conclude he had committed suicide.

A Light in the Mountains.
How Long Is Eternity?
Tiny Girls in the Front Row.

TALLULAH FALLS SCHOOL,

Georgia, March 3.

In this magnificent school for mountain children, beautifully located, beautiful in the work that it does, you come by excellent roads, a little more than 100 miles from Atlanta, gradually into the heights of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

On the right you see Stone Mountain, the "biggest exposed rock in the world." There are probably in the Himalaya Mountains hidden by trees rocks that would make this look like a pebble, but it is a huge and beautiful rock, a mile walk to the top, marvelously smooth, with a light to guide and warn alpinists forever blinking at the summit.

That rock worn by the wind, rain and frost of millions of years reminds you of Van Loon's comparison through which he sought to convey an idea of eternity. It is only once in 10,000 years a small bird should come to wipe its beak on the rock, and continue to do so at 10,000 year intervals, until the great mass of granite should entirely disappear, that elapsed time would be as one single moment in eternity. Can we hope that ourselves and our proud individuality will last throughout that eternity? Consciousness itself would seem surely to wear out and need renewal in so long a time. Perhaps that is why we need to die and be born again, at short intervals.

You see real country and mountain life along the road. A tall woman walks out of a little wooden house, carrying a pail, turns a windlass, slowly draws up a bucket of water from a well 80 to 100 feet deep, fills her bucket, carries it back.

Innumerable "Model T" automobiles of ancient days, with square perpendicular windshields are packed with children. Seven or eight small boys and girls are crowded into a small two-wheeled cart drawn by a mule on their way to school.

In some parts of Georgia public schools are open on Saturday, closed on Mondays. No one could tell why. In this part of North Georgia people work hard and economize. Little boys in dark blue cotton overalls, have usually two rather new patches, where patches are most appropriate. A man rides astride a slow moving mule, changing to a side saddle position occasionally. Here and there you see an old fashioned horse and buggy, and remember that once two million buggies were made every year in the United States.

Here, high in the Blue Ridge you find as admirable an institution as there is in the United States or in the world, the Tallulah Falls School that offers education for the minds and training for the hands of mountain children, boys and girls, from long distances back in the mountains, the children come to this school, those from the greatest distances live in the school, the other two-thirds come day by day.

Honor and public thanks are due to Mrs. J. K. Otley, head of the school's board of directors, to the devoted teachers that give their lives of hard work and affectionate care to the children, and to all the good women of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs that see to it with their contributions, that the children shall have what they need.

The mountain girls and boys do all the work of the school, learning housekeeping, cooking, weaving, carpenter work, basket making, all training for the hands, while taking the regular educational course. The girls of the mountains prepare and cook the food put before you. Only one woman is employed to direct the work of the girls, among whom the older girls take care of tiny little girls.

Twenty girls in white sing the blessing before luncheon. Nobody knows how far it is to Heaven, with new-fangled astronomical ideas, but you feel sure that those clear young voices travel the whole distance.

One of the girls, 17 years old, has been in the school for 10 years. Moonshiners killed her father, and when they came out of jail the moonshiners threatened to kill the mother and four young children. The mother and the children were taken into the school for protection.

MOLD FOR TELESCOPE MIRROR

At bottom is pictured a great mold, from which a beehive furnace has been rolled back, to show construction of the form with which will be made the 200-inch telescope mirror, the 17-foot-wide "eye," which will see four times farther than ever before, as it waits at the Corning (N. Y.), glass works for the pouring of the Pyrex glass of which it will be fabricated. At the top is shown a trial 120-inch mirror completed. The rib structure in this is practically the same as that of the bigger disc. The mass of heights and hollows adds to the strength, provides for equal support when installed in the telescope and cuts down the weight. This mirror was poured eight months ago. It has been cooling most of the time since. When the 200-inch disc is poured, it will be allowed to cool for the remainder of this year. Five years ago astronomers, with a grant of $6,000,000 from the International Education Board, began their plans to build the telescope for which these discs are being fabricated.

The Father Is As Important As the Mother

The Mere Fact of Motherhood Does Not Change Character.

By Elsie Robinson

I AM a mother. I believe in motherhood. I believe that motherhood is the most natural and should be the most beautiful and profitable career for women.

I also believe that a fine mother yields a power second to none on earth. Her's is truly a holy life. BUT I don't believe that all mothers are fine mothers. Nor that even most mothers are fine mothers.

To the contrary, I believe that the profession of motherhood is being ignored, carelessly, and even with a crookedness and downright graft as any other profession on earth. And I am increasingly convinced that, under surface, American motherhood, AS IT IS, is a menace to this country.

Strong words! Yes—and they'll cost me many an admiring reader. For you can criticize anything else on earth, but you mustn't say a word against the Modern Mama.

But they are true words, which should be said. And—just because motherhood to me seems the highest of all callings—I'm going to say them. For the sort of motherhood we too commonly see is a blot on the profession.

No craft on earth calls for more technical knowledge and careful training than that of a mother. But what actually happens? The average mother knows less about her job than a Supreme Court Judge knows about toe-dancing.

By some miraculous hocus-pocus, a mother is supposed to become automatically endowed with all requisite wisdom and skill—as well as a Sanctified Character. Henceforth, she is on a pedestal—for life and there is no crime on earth more sordid than lack of reverence for A Mother.

THIS IS FIFTEEN—AND NOTHING BUT! Mothers must achieve sense and stamina by exactly the same slow, plugging methods which other humans use. Motherhood has no more power to endow a female with wisdom than have bunnies, hives, varicose veins or faller arches. If you're a Feevish Pinhead before the little darling is born, you're a Feevish Pinhead after. And no more entitled to medals than any other Feevish Pinhead.

Yet, though these facts are obvious to the simplest Intelligence, society, en masse, rejects them with scorn. Probably because society, en masse, was raised by Mothers. And all too often, Mama makes a racket of her job.

I have borne a child, supported children, and I shall always maintain—

THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE HAS NOTHING ON THE FIST THAT BRINGS HOME THE BACON.

It requires just as much courage and consecration to be a good father as it does to be a good mother. And—feminine prejudice to the contrary—it's as tough on the nerves. Only Mother takes hers in concentrated doses, over a few years. While Dad is still trying to pay off the second mortgage when he dies.

These facts, however, are platitude, if not entirely denied, by most mothers. Mothers, for some strange reason, think that baby belongs to THEM. BUT ANY FATHER WHO SUPPORTS A CHILD HAS AS GREAT AN EQUITY IN IT AS THE MOTHER WHO BEARS IT.

The discussion would seem to be a matter for Mom and Dad to wrangle out between them. But, unfortunately, it has far graver implications. The importance of a GOOD mother has always been beyond reckoning, but of recent years, since they got the vodka, the mothers—some of them heels of the worst order—have acquired incredible power. Editors are in awe of them. Judges tremble before them. When it comes to potential violence, Mama's Tears make T. N. T. look like sweet butter. As a consequence, poor old Dad hasn't a Chinaman's chance, in most courts, before an outraged Mother.

All of which makes most of us deluded females think we're sitting pretty. But I'm telling you, sisters—WELL REGRET IT SOME DAY! We can't get by on our sob record forever. Sooner or later, they'll make us observe a code!

Marking Clothes

College girls and people who travel a great deal require some sort of identification marks on their underwear and linens. They may be marked by the owner and then the marks can be kept small and put in an obscure place. Dip the place to be marked into cold starch and then press with a warm iron. This will give a smooth, stiff surface that can be written upon readily, using pen and indelible ink.

Puddle Muddle's Celebration Has An Interruption

By Mary Graham Bonner

JELLY BEAR was as happy as happy could be. He felt he could help himself to what ever he saw to eat, now that Honey Bear was so well fed by the visitors to the cave.

He sniffed the delicious breezes, and enjoyed the air. Then he turned over stone after stone and found little grubs and other delicacies to eat.

Willy Nilly had put away for the winter had not been eaten; so he ate it! The pantry doors, he was delighted to find, were not locked. In fact everything in Puddle Muddle's was as happy as could be. There would be plenty of time to attend to chores later on, Willy Nilly thought. And surely before the Bear cubs opened their eyes his ears would not be sticking out, as they were now. He had made up his mind to fasten them with adhesive tape so that they would stay close to his head.

Rip and Top Notch, the Ducks, Christopher, the Bears, and Willy Nilly were all in the best of spirits. All of a sudden they saw Grandpa Grouchy Galump in the distance, down by the Ducks' pond.

"What is he doing there?" the Ducks quacked. "None felt quite easy when Grandpa was nearby. And it was no wonder!

THE BRIDGE PLAYERS' FORUM

A big hand that caused much grief, in a recent duplicate, follows:

♠ 7532
♥ Q73
♦ 97
♣ K106

SOUTH
♠ 10
♥ KJ954
♦ AK1086
♣ J8

All vulnerable and East the dealer. The bidding was different at various tables. In all cases East passed, some of the South players opened the bid with a 1♦. In the majority of cases, the correct bid of 1♥ was made by South (open the higher ranking suit, if biddable, and the same length).

West then made various overcalls, some players doubted to show the great hand, others overcalled in the suit previously bid (which of course is a defensive force—a defending player can make).

North passed and East, in the hands where the Hts. had been opened bid the 1♦ suit. If 1♦ had been opened and partner either doubled or overcalled in the same suit bid the N. T. to show the Hts. control. From that point the bidding went merrily on by West. First the Sp. suit was shown and then the Cls. until West played the hand at 4 Sp. and was defeated, or happened in one case, the East hand rather hopelessly dropped the bid (even after the force) at the 4 Cl. level and 5 Cls. were made. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Kaiser,

Bananas an Excellent Food For These Cold-Weather Days

PERHAPS you hadn't stopped to think about it, but bananas are an excellent cold weather food.

This nourishing fruit, so rich in starch and sugar, is perhaps served often enough raw. It is an old lunch-box favorite, a standby at the breakfast table, a favored salad ingredient, and the obliging answer to the question of what to have for a quick dessert. But a few of us appreciate its possibilities as a cooked dish.

Bananas are very reasonable on our market now and the following combination of bananas and ham will be found delightful as well as economical.

Hamettes with Bananas.
Three eggs.
Three tablespoons flour.
Two tablespoons milk.
One-fourth teaspoon pepper.
Two cups ground ham (left-overs, if you have them).
One tablespoon chopped onion.
Six small bananas.
Lemon juice.

Beat the eggs and add flour, milk, pepper, onion and ham. Fry in deep fat until brown. Serve with bananas which have been sliced lengthwise, dipped in lemon juice, rolled in flour and fried until brown.

Spinach still remains very cheap, but brussels sprouts have shown a slight advance in price. Asparagus from California is considerably more reasonable than when it first appeared on the market.

Cucumbers, both the southern field grown and northern hothouse, are lower in price and radishes are arriving in larger quantities.

Grapefruit and oranges have shown a slight increase in price. Texas Valencia oranges were on the market here for the first time this last week. Strawberries have been considerably lower the last few days.

Although accustomed to seeing everything under the sun put up in cans, it was quite a surprise to find that baked apples are being offered in this way. Open the can and they are all ready to serve. If you prefer them hot, place the can in boiling water and your guests will think they are being served with baked apples piping hot from the oven.

If your butcher doesn't wrap up a bit of parsley with your meat, you can secure it at the market at a very slight cost. Parsley, more valuable than any other herb for the garnishing of dishes, gives the poorest salad or meat a tempting appearance. It imparts a fine flavor to many dishes and the experienced cook would part with any other half dozen condiments more willingly than parsley.

When to Pass Double of One Bid by Opener

Bid Mandatory Unless Opponents Are Vulnerable or Their Suit Is Held.

By P. Hal Sims

IF your partner has doubled an opening bid and the next opponent passes, you must bid, even if you expect to beat the contract.

To beat a contract of one doubled, to beat it two tricks, is no compensation for a game, and it must be well he that your partner can make a game though your hand appears worthless to you. The very fact that nearly all the 13 cards of the suit in which the opening bid was made seem to be concentrated in your hand and that your partner's hand is of an extremely unusual type. He has presumably made a strategic double not for defensive purposes only but with a very freakish distribution of exceedingly aggressive type, and your side should not only re-enter the bidding, but should take it to game if not slam. Probably your partner will force on the next round. If not, then your expectations of beating the bid may prove illusory; they may make five trumps and two high cards against you even if you hold six small trumps or five to K Q and an outside king or so. Werther recently played a hand in four spades doubled and redoubled and made it against six trumps in one hand, having the top six himself. They could not force him on the first lead, as he had the ace of their suit; so he drew trumps and ran three tricks in an off suit, thus taking the game. This is a very rare hand against which one opponent—the one short in spades—might have made a Sims strategic double, which his partner, with six small spades and two kings, would have permitted to do so by the system.

The only time to leave in a double at this point is if (a) The opponents are vulnerable. (b) You have a splendid bid yourself in their suit, by which I mean at least five cards headed by an ace-king or ace-queen-jack. It now looks like a psychology or at any rate a hopeless position for your vulnerable opponents, and you may expect the extrication process to start—and once denials and rescue commence, a four-figure score is in view for your side. If your partner's double was distributional, he can obviously double every bid they make; if strategic, with only one long suit, the opponents have a good out anyway, it may be, and would have got there anyhow. They might have been in an off suit, and fail to reach it because of the double and your business pass. If one has

Hollywood Wants Lean Actor For a Role in "The Thin Man"

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, March 1. Is there an actor on the order of the late Ernest Torrence in Hollywood? Or in New York, for that matter? If there is, if he will communicate with Hunt Stromberg at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, he may get himself a very good job in "The Thin Man." Hunt is searching frantically for a character lead in this story. He must be six feet two or three inches tall and an actor with experience. William Powell, of course, has the lead, but this character is second in importance, and the picture cannot go into production until the right type is found.

Hollywood is wondering whether Jack Holt, one of its most eligible members, has at last succumbed or whether it's just professional interest in a co-worker's career. He has been on the Lillian Bond set every moment he isn't working at Columbia, and she has returned the compliment by visiting him. Since Jack's divorce has become a veritable hermit, choosing to spend his time with his son, Tim. Not that the girls have been indifferent to Holt, who is exceedingly attractive and popular with the other set, but that he hasn't shown any interest until Miss Bond came into his life.

The old reliable firm of Teedle and Tweedledum, started in "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," may continue to flourish on the Paramount lot. Emanuel Cohen is considering co-starring Jack Oakie and Roscoe Karns in "Is That So?"

Gloria Stuart, domestic troubles notwithstanding, is devoting plenty of time to her movie career. She has just been borrowed by the Halperins for the lead in "The Great American Harem" at Radio. Glenn Tryon, who has been working on the script, will return to acting in this picture. William Gargan plays opposite Miss Stuart. That is, if doubling, now the opening bidder would have got in a negative double, received a heart response, and nothing could keep them out of four hearts.

You may play constantly for 25 years and never have the occasion to pass your partner's double of an opening bid. I merely mention the one possibility of its happening, under my methods of handling the double, because otherwise many of you will, with your usual alertness, notice the omission and write in to inquire about it. I want to make it very clear, however, that this ban on a "business pass" of a double of one applies in this summary manner only when your partner will not have another chance to bid assuming that the opening bidder passes: in other words, when your partner may well be able to make. Over a redouble, or under other bidding sequences, I will discuss later in connection with the third kind of double, when your partner has another bidding opportunity inevitably coming to him, you may pass when you expect to defeat the contract of one. This I explained yesterday.

He has been seeing Virginia Felina Lehmann for well over two weeks, escorting her to the fights and other places; all a pretty piece of acting on his part; Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young created a lot of interest when they appeared at church together Sunday; Nancy Carroll lovely in an extremely smart sports costume at Sardi's; Oona Munson back in Hollywood, refusing to so much as talk about a movie job; she sails for London to appear in "Her Master's Voice" with Roland Young and Laura Hope Crewes; Violet Bird, fiancée of Leo Diegel, guest of honor at a shower given by Mrs. Sheets Gallagher; George Rosenberg, "Rosie" to his friends, handing over the $100 money order he won at the motion picture relief fund bridge party to his mother.

heart grow hard in the struggle against other men, would like to feel as a man should feel once more before he dies, let him go to that school in the mountains of Georgia and see the children as they walk in and take their places.

Emotion you feel as you have not felt for many years not since the days when life seemed real and everything possible, as the smallest of all the children, the one to sit proudly in the first two rows. They are, in the first row, so very small, a little higher than your knees, that two of them sit comfortably on each chair. The faces of these children, their clear eyes, innocent and wondering, as they study the strange big creatures that have come to see them, are most beautiful.

Hostess Can Have Big Day In the Stores

All Sorts of Clever Doodles Seen—They Make Entertaining a Delight.

By Sylvia

If you've stilled and stalled about inviting the boss and his wife for dinner, or paying back those engagements you accepted before the depression, this is the time to begin hostessing. The stores are filled with all sorts of clever doodads designed for the special purpose of making an informal supper party look like a feast for the gods. You can serve everything out of one pot with the air of a queen, providing that you are equipped with certain modern gadgets.

The one-pot supper depends for its success upon compartment trays with waiside cubbyholes, shining chromium and wooden chafing dishes, and impressive but not too-brotherly platters and plates. Among the pots is one of natural colored, rough looking pottery which looks like two skillets with their faces together. For baking beans and serving them, too, and for many other uses you'll search a long time before finding anything quite so effective.

For that spaghetti supper which the men will be certain to like, an aluminum and wooden serving dish will be the sort you need. This consists of a large covered aluminum dish which rests on a round wooden tray. A wood spoon fits into its own niche in the cover. Another set combining wood and aluminum is designed for Welsh rarebit.

Electric chafing dishes are taking the place of the old-fashioned variety which flourished a generation or so ago. Chromium is used for their brilliant finish but even this isn't sufficient for attractiveness as brightly colored trimmings have been added. Red handles and knobs introduce a striking color contrast.

You've seen those cherry and tomato shaped salt and pepper shakers, but have you seen the place-card holders to match? The cherries have been flourishing a generation or so ago. Chromium is used for their brilliant finish but even this isn't sufficient for attractiveness as brightly colored trimmings have been added. Red handles and knobs introduce a striking color contrast.

The hostess who is planning a modest supper during the Lenten season will delight in serving her main course on a striking fish-shaped platter. This is of white semi-porcelain, with one end designed to resemble the head of a fish and the other to resemble the tail. Individual service plates may be obtained to complete the set.

Mermaids supply the deep-sea motif on another distinctive set consisting of large platter and plates to match. These pieces again impress with the style importance of the all-white dinner service. The design is so elaborate that it completely covers the surface of each piece. The French are credited with its inspiration.

For that supper party which might develop into a hilarious affair with the guests tossing the plates to each other, wooden dishes will save the nerves and the pocketbook of the hostess. The plates are unrelieved by any decoration and they aren't even treated to a coat of stain or polish. Spoons with handles sufficiently long to dip into the highest glass also may be obtained. These add colorful stripes to their lines.

Compartment dishes and trays have become almost indispensable to the buffet supper, as it is being revived in 1934. For appetizers, relishes and individual dishes, they have no equal. Added to the long list of interesting types is one of white porcelain which has six heart-shaped dishes placed around a star-shaped center. All repose on a porcelain platter which, of course, can be used separately as a serving dish or tray.

A Pin in Time. If you find the garment you wish to wear needs a few stitches and you have no time but must use a pin instead, use a safety pin or an inexpensive pin of some sort. There is no easier way of losing a good brooch than by using it in the wrong place.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A WOMAN 23 years old. I am to be married this summer. I am working and living with an aunt. My fiancé wants me to live with his people, as they have a large house, at least for a year. He thinks, after that, times will be better and he will have more money. My aunt is opposed to my going and living with his people, while we are good friends now, she thinks we will not be if we are under the same roof. My aunt has no objections to my fiancé or his family, but thinks he ought to be more considerate of me and that I should not work after I am married. She thinks it would be better to take a furnished room elsewhere, and perhaps go there only for meals; that I would be more to myself and out of the house and their way a part of the time.

ANXIOUS.

Your aunt is speaking from conviction; no doubt having watched the many failures in marriage that have grown out of too close association of in-laws. If it is possible to arrange not to live with your fiancé's family, I believe it is best. Of course, many women have made a success of such conditions, but it seems to be discretion not to undertake it. With all best intentions on both sides, sometimes tension and friction is very great and the sparks that fly create a breach hard to mend. At the end of the year, other objections to your moving might be offered, and it would be harder for you than to insist now upon separate dwellings.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

PLEASE be kind enough to publish this letter. A group of young men with many ideas but no capital have organized a social club, the object of which is to give parties, truck picnics this summer, and, if we have enough talent, we will start a baseball team. Young men from seventeen to twenty-one years old are invited to join. They can telephone, after 7 P. M., any evening. MUIBERRY 3540 or Roosevelt 2680. Thank you, Mrs. Carr. A. K.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM trying to save my children the self-consciousness that has always been a mortification to me. I don't exactly approve of pushing children and their father thinks we ought not to expect any manner of them until they get older. But I think it is real hard when you are pretty near grown to have to get polite and have good manners—you feel sort of affected. What shall I do? NANCY G. M.

It is rather difficult to put into words a method by which you can acquire social ease and charm of manner. But inquiries come to me so often about it, though few think of making a beginning in childhood. "The Inferiority Complex" is a subject that has become too common. Considered socially, it is perhaps to be preferred to the too common inferiority of gushing manner. But I believe the importance of introducing their children properly and having them meet people.

When children enter the room where there are visitors, the mother should say, easily, "Mrs. Visitor, this is my little girl (or boy), Nancy or Philip, or whatever the name is." "I have told her about your guests (your dogs, your fish pond or whatever it may be) and she is so interested."

If Nancy is a small girl she makes her little curtsy or Philip bows just a wee bit from the waist, and if the lady holds out her hand, which she should do, these children know how to shake hands, instead of offering a wilted little rag. The children need not linger at all. If they are not invited to call, they are called and turn to "Mother," asking to be excused; they have to do this or that.

In this way, as they grow up, they are easy in the company of strangers and miss the suffering and awkwardness which they feel, are "company manners." They are neither shy nor forward, and the time for setting polite and grown-up never comes because they have no sudden consciousness. They are natural and have a charm which only naturalness and ease can give them later on.

My dear Mrs. Carr: Where will you please let me know where to apply for a Forest Ranger's job? W. P. K.

Young Married Couples Find Inter-family Strife Easier To Avoid in Separate Home

HOW TO ARRANGE A BEAUTIFUL TABLE

A handsome table setting for luncheon as demonstrated by an expert.

A TABLE arranged with beautiful silverware is more or less a modern sight. In the days of the Roman Empire people carried their spoons in their pockets, and pulled them out when the eating began. We don't know what happened to the guest who forgot his tools, for there was a n't enough silverware to go around.

In a talk at the Woman's Club, Calder V. Vaughan pointed out that silverware reflected the tempo of its time. C. V. Vaughan Tables demonstrating the formal dinner, the luncheon and Sunday evening buffet supper were arranged by Mrs. Arthur Kindall.

A bowl of white lilies formed the centerpiece for the formal dinner table. The table should be set when the guests come in, although the silver service is removed when the entree appears. There are four goblets, the silver one for water, Chablis wine to be served with the soup course, a small wine glass for port and champagne served with the salad and sweets.

How to Cook Fish a la Aida As Main Dish of Lenten Meal

By GLADYS T. LANG

The menu:
Chicken Broth with Artichokes
Fish a la Aida
Flemish Carrots
Green Salad
Pyramid Eclair, Chocolate Sauce
Coffee.

The recipes:
Chicken Broth With Artichokes.
Cover bones from a baked chicken with three quarts of water. Bring slowly to a boil, then add one-fourth pound of salt pork, a small knuckle of veal, two carrots, one onion, a few stalks of celery, a little mace, salt and pepper, broken egg shell and the egg white, beaten with a little ice water. Strain through a towel and reheat, adding one teaspoon of cornstarch which has been dissolved in a little cold water. Let come to a boil, adding one cup of diced artichokes and a small amount of curry powder. Beat the yolks of two eggs with one-third cup of cream. Four hot soup over egg and cream, stirring while pouring, and serve at once.

Fish a la Aida.
Three fillets of haddock.
Two pounds of spinach.
One pound of mushrooms.
One pound of cooked shrimps.
One and one-half cups of cream sauce.
Two egg yolks.
Three tablespoons of sherry.
Salt and pepper.

Cook and season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Foach's fillets, starting in cold water in which are placed a few pieces and bring water to a boil. Peel and slice mushrooms and cook over a slow fire for 10 minutes in one-fourth cup of butter and one-fourth cup of milk. Salt and pepper. On a buttered pyrex plate, spread the spinach, then over this the haddock fillets, surrounded with the sautéed mushrooms, then a border of the cooked shrimps. Four over all one and a half cups of rich cream sauce to which two egg yolks, beaten with one-fourth

Ice Cream Clowns
A most attractive way of serving the ice cream at the children's party and one that will please them mightily is to place a round ball of vanilla ice cream in the center of a flat plate. With a toothpick dip into chocolate make eyes, mouth and nose. Arrange a small ice cream cone at a jaunty angle for a hat. Decorate the hat with three pompons of whipped cream from the pastry tube and make a frill around its neck by the same means. If the ball of ice cream is chocolate the features may be marked out with whipped cream.

Potato Dumplings
Grate three large potatoes, drain off water and add as much milk as the water drained off, one teaspoon salt and enough flour to make a batter the consistency of bread dough. Have ready a pot of boiling water or stock, into which drop the batter, about one-third tablespoon to each dumpling. Boil for five minutes or until they float to the top of the stock. Take out and put them into a heated dish. Four over the top one tablespoon bacon, chopped fine and fried until brown. Good with sauerkraut.

Easter Sunday Observance by A Tea Dance

While Day Is One of Rejoicing, Strictly Good Taste Would Prevent Festivity.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post:
I WOULD like very much to have a tea (with dancing) on Easter Sunday afternoon. Our home is large enough to ask my friends here. But my mother does not believe with me that any sort of festivity on Easter afternoon is allowed even in the houses of people who are most liberal about their religion. What is your opinion?

Answer: It would be quite all right to be at home to friends, but to dance is not quite suitable to Easter Sunday. I do feel, of course that Easter is a day of rejoicing, and coming as it does after the days of Lent you certainly could not give a party in Holy Week! Does give reason why you should want to choose this particular afternoon, but even so I would, in your place, choose another day of the week—for a dance. I really would.

My dear Mrs. Post: I have several acquaintances who will not touch wine or refreshments of any kind unless I join them. Confidentially, I have been trying to cut down the extra calories without having a soul know about it, because I don't want to join the army of chattering women whose only thought in life seems to be starches and proteins. If they hear about me I'll automatically and forcefully become a member of the clan. But what shall I tell people when I don't want to eat between meals either in my own house or when I'm out?

Answer: You might make believe to eat by nibbling, or you might encourage THEM to diet by helping to set them an example.

Dear Mrs. Post: I have a friend who lets her daughter have large parties of young people at the house, to play games and dance, and always makes a point to see that she and her husband go to a movie or to play bridge in another house just so they will not be interfering in this generosity expected of parents of the modern generation if they would keep up with their children?

Answer: This has been the custom of the last ten or fifteen years. At present the younger people are becoming less provincial and less embarrassed or perhaps less impressed with the privilege of being thought old enough to have a party alone by themselves, which in stricter days was evidence of emancipation. Today an increasing number of the really modern take their parents—and their parents' friends—with better grace and greater knowledge of the world.

Record Crowd Sees New York Stamp Display

Medals Awarded in Nine Classes of Collections at National Exhibition.

The National Stamp Exhibition held at Rockefeller Center in New York had a total attendance of 102,316 persons, one of the largest crowds to ever visit a philatelic display anywhere.

There were nine different competitive classes in which medals were awarded for the outstanding collection in each class. These medals were awarded Saturday night, Feb. 17, 1934, the last day of the show, at the banquet.

The grand prize of the show was given to Charles Currie for his general collection of nineteenth century stamps of the world. This goes to show that it is not always the specialized or fancy collections which are considered the best. Mr. Currie's mountings are very simple. Incidentally, he calls his collection a small collection, yet it is almost complete, with only a few blank spaces remaining in his albums.

It has been decided to issue the Maryland Tercentenary stamp on Sunday, March 25, 1934, at St. Mary's City, Md. Facilities have been provided to handle first day covers to the extent of 25 covers per collector. Face value 3 cents.

There will be a commemorative stamp for Mother's day. The first day of issue will be shortly before Sunday, May 13, 1934, to enable sons to write letters to their mothers using the Mother's day commemorative stamp. Face value 3 cents.

The Postoffice Department has been requested to issue a stamp in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the City of Brooklyn, April 17, 1934.

It costs the Postoffice Department approximately 65 cents to manufacture 1000 stamps.

The first railway mail service in America was begun on August 26, 1834, and the first airmail service was inaugurated May 15, 1918.

REPUBLICANS RAP
NEW DEAL RECORD,
'BAFFLING' POLICY

Senator Hastings and Congressman Bolton Declare Situation Is Hindrance to Recovery.

COURSE UNCHARTED AFTER FULL YEAR

'Many Pledges Untried and Abandoned and Monetary Plan Bewilderingly Uncertain.'

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—An official Republican criticism of the "New Deal" policies, issued tonight in the form of a joint statement by Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware and Representative Chester C. Bolton of Ohio, chairman of the Combined Republican Senatorial and Congressional Campaign Committees, declares that the Roosevelt administration, at the end of its first year, is found "with many platform pledges untied and practically abandoned, with policies unshaped and conflicting, with its monetary program bewilderingly uncertain."

The situation is described as "baffling enough to prove a hindrance to the return of prosperity." "Action," says the statement, in part, "is not necessarily progress. The result has been the arbitrary reorganization of industry under Government control through the NRA. Unemployment has been lessened only slightly in comparison with the vast sums expended. The desired benefit from manipulated increased wages has been more than offset by the increase in cost of living."

"Swept Off Gold Standard." "The country has been swept off the gold standard. The dollar has been devaluated. Government contracts to pay obligations in gold have been repudiated. Inflationary powers were demanded and given the administration permitting a total of $6,000,000,000 inflation. This is the way the Democrats kept their promise of sound money 'at all hazards.'"

"The administration has staged a money extravaganza. Unprecedented peace-time expenditures have been authorized despite promises to balance the budget. So profligate have been these expenditures that the executive expresses the hope that the national debt may not exceed $32,000,000,000 by June 30, 1935, a figure $7,000,000,000 greater than the debt at the close of the World War and an increase of $9,000,000,000 in the first two years of the Democratic administration."

"Bureaucracy, so bitterly assailed by the Democratic party in the past, has grown with such rapidity that everyone is befuddled. More than 30 new agencies having uncounted personnel have been created. More are in the making. Yet the Democratic platform promised a reduction in Government expense by at least 25 per cent."

"Series of Inconsistencies." "The administration's farm policies are a series of inconsistencies. Proposed reduction in acreage and crops has been offset by authorization for more irrigation and reclamation projects."

"Taking the agricultural program as an index, it appears certain that many of the administration's policies are designed to create a huge political machine at the expense of all the taxpayers. It would perpetuate a Democratic dynasty."

"Since March a year ago, constructive criticism has been denounced, critics have been vilified and dissenters have left administration councils—Woodin, Acheson, Prof. Sprague and a number in the NRA, just to mention a few. Citizens who dared to exercise their constitutional rights to be other than mere 'yes' men, have been tracked down upon and called Tories."

"This intolerance of criticism has started the people questioning the dictatorial course of Government. With the canceling of the mail contracts, these questionings have given way to alarm that the administration should so disregard the constitutional rights of citizens as to abrogate contract obligations without hearing and under circumstances which dignified as frauds, every hold-up of an air mail contract."

"The people of the United States will follow less readily a party whose leaders act so precipitously on such grave matters. The outrageous, inconsiderate handling of the air mail situation has served to warn the American people that"
